Poll shows 49% of respondents would relocate for love

An informal poll recently conducted by aLoveLinksPlus.com asking "Would you relocate for love?" showed that 49% of respondents would move for love.

"Would you relocate for love?" was asked to the visitors of aLoveLinksPlus.com, an advice and dating portal website.

"Surprisingly almost 50% of the people that answered this 'Quick Poll' told us that they would move to be closer to one they love", reported Robert Lee, owner of aLoveLinksPlus.com.

"This Quick Poll featured one of the more important questions since the answer drives home the basics of online dating "Would you move to be closer to someone you've 'clicked with' online" Mr. Lee explained.

"Any type of dating has a distance factor and if you know when you start out with online dating that the odds are 50/50 that the person you meet would change their life and move closer to be with you, with another 40% open to the idea of moving, well, that makes online dating not only that much more accessible but successful too."

Quick polls are open to all visitors to aLoveLinksPlus.com and encompass a wide variety of subjects. Although they are not scientifically based "they do offer a fun component to online activity" said Mr. Lee.

Complete results to the beginning of April 2005 are: (1) Yes 49% (2) No 11% (3) Maybe 40%
