

ProBlogger Offers Top Rated Resource, Helping Bloggers Earn Money

ProBlogger, Darren Rowse, earns a full time living from Blogging and now offers free advice to bloggers on how to make money from their blogs.

August 4, 2005, North Fitzroy, Victoria, Australia – Darren Rowse has become quite a popular fellow in the ever-growing Blogging community. He discovered blogs in a 2002 article, and has been an avid blogger ever since.

Eventually, his hobby grew into a full-time career, and Darren now works full time, operating a family of sites including the popular Digital Photography Blog (www.digitalphotographyblog.com) that bring in nice living from contextual advertising, affiliate programs, and other forms of online advertising.

Because of his success, Darren has achieved the coveted title of “A-List” blogger, and his opinions are very valuable to those who are aspiring to make a living in the blogging world. Seeing a need for this information, Darren created ProBlogger (www.probblogger.net), which is a free resource, dedicated to helping other bloggers earn money.

Covering topics from search engine placement strategies, advertising optimisation, to time management, ProBlogger (www.probblogger.net) imparts his wisdom on a community of followers hoping to recreate the success he has seen. Over the last few months, the popularity of the site has soared, and with it, a sense of community on www.probblogger.net, as visitors have begun to share their own tips and tricks.

With blogs growing in popularity and hitting mainstream use in the corporate world, a site like www.probblogger.net is a much needed and quickly growing resource for all things blog related.
