

Stanford Center for Professional Development Selects New Business System

Stanford Center for Professional Development at Stanford University acquires Destiny OneCE™ to address their continuing education business needs

Toronto, ON (PRWEB) January 16, 2006 -- Destiny Solutions today announced that the Stanford Center for Professional Development (SCPD) at Stanford University has chosen to implement Destiny OneCE™, the first strategic continuing education business solution. SCPD delivers award-winning graduate and professional development programs from the Stanford School of Engineering and affiliated departments to professionals in industry and government worldwide. To support their diverse business operations, SCPD sought a unified yet flexible software platform exemplified by Destiny OneCE.

Student and instructor self-service capabilities, real-time information knowledge management and increased operational efficiencies through automated workflow are a few of the benefits SCPD anticipates as a result of replacing several disparate systems and databases with the all-encompassing Destiny OneCE.

"We were looking for a company that understands our unique needs, has a solid approach to web-based software design, and a proven implementation process," said Les Stout, SCPD Director of Technology. "We felt very comfortable with Destiny's team and found them to be extremely knowledgeable and professional. Their system, which instills continuing education best business practice, will streamline our operations and allow us to focus on serving our learners and growing our business".

Designed exclusively for continuing education, OneCE provides operational efficiencies and superior information management for staff, students and instructors. OneCE effectively incorporates all aspects of registration, marketing, curriculum management, workflow, finance and reporting into a single web-based system which can easily integrate with other campus-wide systems.

"We are delighted to have been selected by SCPD, a world-leader in distance learning," said Shaul Kuper, CEO, Destiny Solutions Inc. "Our commitment to focus exclusively on continuing education provides us the opportunity to advance our product in order to address the ever changing needs of our customers."

About Destiny Solutions Inc.

Destiny Solutions Inc. is the creator of Destiny OneCE™: the First Strategic CE Business Solution. The company is focused exclusively on the continuing education industry and has created technology that liberates customers from mundane administrative tasks and enables them to focus on their strategic priorities. Destiny Solutions' clients include the Stanford Center for Professional Development, the University of California Santa Cruz Extension and the University of Toronto School of Continuing Studies. For more information please visit www.destinysolutions.com.

About the Stanford Center for Professional Development

The Stanford Center for Professional Development collaborates with Stanford University departments and faculty to offer graduate degrees, credit courses, certificates, and professional development short courses to meet the career-long learning needs of engineers, scientists, technology professionals and management. Courses are delivered via the Internet and local area broadcast as well as on campus and at the work site. For more information, visit <http://scpd.stanford.edu>

Contact

Matthew White

(416) 480-0500 ext 200

###