Biography Donna MacQuigg

Donna MacQuigg is a multi-published author of historical and contemporary romance. Her Scottish and Medieval romances were published through Kensington in mass market paperback, distributed by Wal-Mart. Their success resulted in releases to the European market. Her first electronic book, published by Linden Bay Romance entitled TRUST AND TREASON will be released in April 2006. Her current western romance, THE PRICE OF PRIDE, will be published in hardcover by Thomson-Gale/Five Star in May 2006. An interview of Donna and her Five Star release will be featured in OFF THE SHELF, distributed to approximately 8,000 libraries. Her latest contemporary romance, IT'S NEVER TOO LATE, placed fourth in the Great Beginnings Contest.

As a former Vice President of her local RWA chapter, Donna chaired and promoted LERA's first romantic writers conference. She published a research article with the LERA's handbook for writers, THE LERA WRITER'S GUIDE. She has shared her expertise in research by conducting classes for her local RWA chapter in medieval weaponry and costumes, archery, castles and swordplay. Her experience in raising Arabian horses, and her marriage to a police officer, resulted in classes in western weapons, gunfights and costume.

She currently lives in Albuquerque, New Mexico, with her husband and one little dog, and writes full time. In her spare time she enjoys tending to her horses, writing children's stories for her daughter's first grade class, and brainstorming with her best friend and multi-published critique partner.
