Anyone Interested In 50 Million?

Custody Calculations; Helping Local and State Governments
With New Revenue For Their Family Law Court System

About The Company: Custody Calculations is a fully automated internet web site dealing with family law issues and is available for use by family law attorneys, judicial officers, courts, Custody Evaluators, mediators, individuals, counseling centers, mother rights groups, father's rights groups, domestic violence groups and centers etc.. The web site offers an entirely new way to deal with issues such as custody and visitation, child support, alimony, property settlement, court orders, parental alienation syndrome, false child abuse allegations, false police reports, custody and visitation calendars reducing the trauma, drama and devastation of divorce, reducing the number of court appearances and legal fees.

With a wellness program for employers this web site has it all including the ability to provide the possibility of new revenue in excess of 50 million dollars or more depending on the number of divorce filings for that municipality or state court system. No other entity, public or private has ever come close to developing anything like it. Backed by endorsements by such experts as Dr. J. Michael Bone, Dr. Jayne Major, Dr. Sid Brown, Dr. Steve Summers with pending review on both sides of the arguments, pro mother and pro father rights groups, this program overcomes all of the issues that caused prior attempts at reform to have failed. And because, Custody Calculations, it is a private venture no tax dollars were used for research or development making this a win/win scenario for all involved.

Background:

As elected officials at city and state levels seek to balance budgets in an ever changing economic environment, and provide consistent revenue to fund services such as police, fire, court services, Custody Calculations may play a significant role in that endeavor. That is because Custody Calculations is the first company to develop a system that will allow the family law court system to raise revenue from a source and in a manner never before conceived of. Designed for use nationally in the various family law court systems, regardless of the city or state.

Fully automated, the system can be applied without the usual limitations of other previous solutions, issues such as training, limitations in personnel, time differentials, east or west. Even the different state regulations were factored into the system design, eliminating this obstacle as well. With no requirement to change laws or obtain legislation for its use, Custody Calculations upon launch will be ready for immediate implementation by the courts, custody evaluators, attorneys and others that part of the divorce process including the divorcing parties. But with one significant change over many other internet web sites. Custody Calculations promotes the use of attorneys in the divorce process and discourages the use of In Pro Pers, the representation of persons presenting their own cases, which is so often the case with many other web sites, paralegals or other services. This fully internet web site is a win/win for all of the entities involved.

Behind this software is Catherine MacWillie, a police officer for twenty four years. She began researching the issue of divorce ten years ago after identifying that perhaps as much as 25% of all crime in this country is related to family law, crime ranging from homicides, suicides, kidnaps, abductions, child abuse, and domestic violence, to violation of court orders, and more. But the impact of family law does not stop there. Custody Calculations identified the effects of the divorce process on schools and classrooms, hospitals, emergency rooms, fire departments, social service departments, businesses, real estate, bankruptcy, finance companies, even the workman's compensation system.

Now backed with endorsements by such family law experts and notables as Dr. J. Michael Bone, Custody Evaluator, therapist and Family Law Divorce Consultant, Winter Park, Florida, Dr. Jayne A. Major, Author, Parenting Educator, and Divorce Coach, expert in Parenting Alienation and Parenting Alienation Syndrome, Los Angeles, California, Dr. Sidney Brown, Custody Evaluator and therapist, Los Angeles, California, now retired, researcher Dr. Steve Summer, Los Angeles, California, demonstrating that Custody Calculations has the support, evaluation and creditability for acceptance to incorporate an entirely new solution for the family law divorce process using technology, evidence and the law for reform as is appropriate to a court hearing process.

Custody Calculations' ability to provide the court and divorcing parties with comprehensive and detailed court orders with specific dates of custody and visitation in simple-to-understand language at the onset of the divorce process eliminates the ignorance or confusion that usually exist in court orders in the format that they are currently given now.

This will allow the courts to fine Petitioner or Respondent when they violate court orders, providing for the first time, real consequences for behavior in opposition to the rulings of the courts. By increasing the fines until the courts receive compliance by the violating party with the court's receiving the revenue. In this manner we can impact many of the issues currently creating so much disruption during the divorce process. This is entirely new revenue from a source never before identified or recognized. It is revenue collected from the persons who are abusing the system.

Similar to the concept that the issuance of traffic tickets by law enforcement reduces violations for speed and improves the safety of those on the road, fines will endeavor to do the same in family law, with all sides benefiting. Revenue from fines in family law could mean as much as much as 50 million dollars a year or more for some states, depending on filing rates. Revenue will grow quickly initially and be high for the period of time it takes for the system to have a true impact on public behavior. As the courts and individuals realize the effects of compliance that Custody Calculations will provide, behaviors will change and revenues will level off. Still, without a doubt there will be huge increase in funds for supporting much-needed issues such as judicial officers, commissioners, court clerks, repairs to outdated buildings and services. Everyone will benefit.
