Value-priced at just $5.99 per month, the Security Shield 2007 software package provides an all-in-one security product that includes antivirus, anti-spyware, firewall, parental control, rootkit, and spam protection – as well as unlimited customer support included. Some of the industry's most popular security products, on the other hand, require a year-long commitment and charge nearly $30 dollars per call to tech support. Not so with Security Shield 2007, where live ongoing support is part of the package.

Security Shield 2007's pay-as-you-go service offers online users and parents essential security protection from one of the most robust security software products on the market. Built on the trusted foundation of F-Secure technology, the software provides all technical support from its headquarters in Boca Raton, Florida. Service options start at just $5.99 per month for a single PC and $9.99 per month for up to three PCs. Customers may also opt for annual service, instead.

"Consumers get a multitude of choices when it comes to the Internet – from speed, to connectivity, to service – yet when it comes to Internet protection, they're still stuck with long-term commitments and too many strings attached," says Arthur Frischman, President of PCSecurityShield. "We're working to change all that. With monthly rates
