Martindale-Hubbell’s lawyers.com from LexisNexis, in conjunction with REDBOOK magazine, commissioned Harris Interactive to conduct a study among U.S. adults age 18+.

Key objectives of this study were to:
- Examine current attitudes about the makeup and importance of the American family;
- Uncover changing views of the American family;
- Assess knowledge of family law issues; and,
- Explore beliefs about same-sex couples.

Results from this study are intended for public release.
Sample & Methodology

✓ Total sample includes 1,092 U.S. adults age 18 or older.
  ▪ Data are weighted to be representative of U.S. adults age 18 or older.

✓ Interviewing was conducted between August 16th and August 23rd, 2006.
  ▪ All interviews were conducted online using The Harris Poll Online (HPOL) database.
  ▪ Interviews averaged 15 minutes in length.

✓ In reviewing this report, please note that:
  ▪ Questions may not add up to 100% due to rounding, the acceptance of multiple responses or the exclusion of any “not sure” or “decline to answer” responses.
  ▪ An asterisk (*) signifies a value of less than one-half percent. A dash (-) represents a value of zero.
  ▪ Throughout, “adults” is used to refer to U.S. adults age 18 or older.
  ▪ The subgroup analyses included are based on age and gender. For the most part, “younger adults” refers to 18-29 year olds or 18-39 year olds, while “older adults” refers to adults 60 or older or adults 50 or older.
Executive Summary
Executive Summary

Importance of the Family

Family is seen as more important to U.S. adults than their health, job or friendships. It contributes to defining individual personalities and is seen as a huge factor in maintaining a stable society.

- More than half of adults (55%) say that their family is the most important aspect of their life at this time – more important than their health (10%) or job (4%).
  - Married adults with children are especially likely to say that their family enriches their life.

- Three-quarters of adults (75%) believe that family helps build an individual’s identity and even more (79%) agree that their family had the biggest influence on their own identity.

- Three-quarters of adults (73%) see family life as very important to upholding a stable society – a greater proportion than education (61%) or the economy (45%).
Executive Summary

Composition of the Family

A significant number of U.S. adults describe their current family structure as typical in comparison to their peers. A majority are married, living with their spouse and some have children living at home.

- 71% of adults agree that their family structure is similar to that of their peers.
- 57% of adults are married and 31% have children under 18 living at home.
- Half of adults (50%) live with their spouse or partner of the opposite sex.
Executive Summary

Evolution of the Family

Many U.S. adults, especially older adults, believe the family is changing dramatically and mostly for the worse. Most also say that it is now harder to maintain family relationships, that marriage has become less important to couples, and that family bonds are not as strong as they once were.

- About seven in ten adults think the family is changing too much (74%) and for the worse (70%).
  - This is especially true for older adults (80% say the family is changing too much and 77% say the family is changing for the worse).

- Adults wish they had stronger relationships with their family (65%) and most are continually trying to build robust family bonds (77%).

- A majority of adults believe that relationships are becoming harder to maintain (63%) and that, compared to ten years ago, marriage is becoming less important to couples (70%).
Executive Summary

The “Traditional” Family Structure

Most U.S. adults say their current family - as well as the family they grew up in - is “traditional”. However, the majority express acceptance for alternative family structures and do not feel that there is pressure today to conform.

✔ About seven in ten adults think there is more than one way to define a family (72%) and nearly half disagree that there is a need to have a traditional family (51%).

- Women (79%) and younger adults (82% of 18-29 year olds) are more likely than their respective counterparts to have a more diverse view of the family.

✔ While a traditional family structure, such as a married heterosexual couple with or without children, is seen as acceptable to the vast majority of adults (94% and 92%, respectively), many non-traditional structures have also gained acceptance.

- A majority of adults believe that...
  ✔ Single parents (84% single fathers; 81% single mothers),
  ✔ A heterosexual couple who live together (71%),
  ✔ Teenage mothers (58%), and
  ✔ An unmarried heterosexual couple raising a child (58%)

... are acceptable family structures.
Executive Summary

Role of the Family

While a significant number of U.S. adults feel that society doesn’t place enough emphasis on family life, most also believe that it is the families themselves (not society) who should act as the primary role models for teaching individuals about family.

- Most adults (95%) say they learned about family life from their own family – primarily their parents.
  - Married men (78%) are more likely to learn about family from their spouse or partner than married women are (61%).

- 94% of adults believe it is the job of the family itself to educate its members about how to maintain family life.

- Nearly half of adults (45%) say society does not place enough importance on family life.
Executive Summary

Same-Sex Couples

U.S. adults are relatively evenly divided on whether they believe same-sex marriage is acceptable, though there is a marked gender and age gap. In general, women and younger adults view same-sex couples more favorably and express greater support of their right to marry.

- Half of adults (51%) support same-sex couples’ right to marry or have civil unions.
  - Both women (54% vs. 46% of men) and younger adults (54% of 18-39 year olds) express even greater support.

- Just over half of adults (52%) find same-sex couples who live together without children to be acceptable.
  - The majority of 18-29 year olds (62%) and females (56%) find same-sex couples without children to be an acceptable family structure.
Executive Summary

Family Legal Issues

In general, U.S. adults do not feel very knowledgeable about family law issues – specifically divorce and civil unions.

✓ 52% of adults have contacted a lawyer about a family law issue, but only one in seven (15%) say they are knowledgeable or very knowledgeable about these laws in general.

✓ Many adults are unaware that:
  ▪ Marriage and civil unions provide different legal rights (54%).
  ▪ Grandparents are not always entitled to visitation rights after a divorce (45%).
  ▪ Divorce laws are not determined by the federal government (40%).
Detailed Findings
Importance of the Family
The family is the most important aspect of adults’ lives. This is especially true for married adults.

Q410: Of the following, which is the most important to you at this time?
* Base: All respondents (n=1,092)
Three in five adults consider it very important to maintain close relationships with family members.

Importance of Relationships with Family Members

- Very important: 61%
- Important: 24%
- Somewhat important: 13%
- Not at all important: 1%

Q425: How important is it that you maintain close relationships with your immediate family members?
Base: All respondents (n=1,092)
About three-quarters of adults say the family is very important to maintaining a stable society; a greater proportion than for education, the economy or health care.

Q500: In your opinion, how important do you think each of the following is in maintaining a stable society?
Base: All respondents (n=1,092)
Most adults believe that a stable family provides children with a sense of identity and a strong moral foundation, helping them become caring, competent, and respectful adults.

Base: All respondents (n=1,092)
Evolution of the Family
Seven in ten adults believe the American family has changed for the worse over the last generation, especially those ages 40 or older.

Change in the American Family

- 70% For worse
- 21% Neither for better nor worse
- 8% For better
- 1% Not at all

Families Have Changed for the Worse — by Age

- 18-29 year olds: 58%
- 30-39 year olds: 61%
- 40-49 year olds: 80%
- 50-59 year olds: 79%
- 60+: 77%

Q520: Compared to a generation ago, how much do you think American families have changed?

Base: All respondents (n=1,092)

Q522: You mentioned that you believe American families have changed compared to a generation ago. Would you say that American families have changed...?

Base: Feel families have changed somewhat or a great deal (n=1,077); 18-29 year olds (n=173); 30-39 year olds (n=180); 40-49 year olds (n=202); 50-59 year olds (n=206); 60+ (n=316)
Nearly three-quarters of adults believe there have been too many changes in the American family, and more than four in five don’t believe family bonds have gotten stronger.

Weaker Families

- There have been too many changes in the American family over the past generation.
- Family bonds in America today are stronger than they were 10 years ago.
- Changes in the overall structure of the American family have negatively impacted America’s place in the world.

Too Many Changes in the Family

- % Agree by Age

  - 18-29 year olds: 58%
  - 30-39 year olds: 73%
  - 40-49 year olds: 81%
  - 50-59 year olds: 77%
  - 60+: 80%

Q525: How strongly do you agree or disagree with each of the following statements?
Base: All respondents (n=1,092); 18-29 year olds (n=176); 30-39 year olds (n=184); 40-49 year olds (n=203); 50-59 year olds (n=209); 60+ (n=320)
About two-thirds of adults say that relationships are more difficult to maintain today and that marriage has become less important to couples, though younger adults (ages 18-39) and women are less likely to express such pessimism.

Nature of Maintaining Relationships
- Easier: 21%
- No change: 16%
- Harder: 63%

Importance of Marriage to Couples
- More important: 19%
- No change: 11%
- Less important: 70%

Q415: Compared to 10 years ago, do you believe it is easier or harder for people to maintain relationships with friends and family or has there not been a change?

Q420: Compared to 10 years ago, do you think that being married has become more or less important to couples or has there not been a change?

Base: All respondents (n=1,092)
Nearly two-thirds of adults would like to be closer with their family and more than three-quarters are actively trying to build a stronger family life.

Q645: How much do you agree or disagree with the following statements

Base: All respondents (n=1,092)
The “Traditional” Family Structure
Traditional family structures (e.g., heterosexual couples with or without kids) receive more widespread acceptance than less traditional ones (e.g., unmarried couples raising kids, teenage mothers with kids or same-sex couples with kids), but most are acceptable to at least half of the adult population.
