Project Management Software Company releases Project Administrator V4. New release includes additional functionality and reporting

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA- October 25, 2006 Project Management Software company Project Perfect Pty Ltd. announced release of Project Administrator version 4. The new version now includes added screens to record project details and functionality to manage project parameters such as assumptions. In addition, there are numerous new reports, and internal changes to prepare for the next evolution which will include the option of a SQL Server database.

You can even create your Project Plan, or Project Charter by recording information in the database, and selecting which of the 13 components of the plan you want to include. For example, you can choose to include, or not include benefits, risks, issues, phases, tasks, or milestones in the project plan.

Project Perfect is based in Sydney Australia and sells their software via the Internet. They have been marketing Project Administrator for six years and sell to 30 countries from Montserrat to South Africa to USA and UK. Their customers range from the US Army to single project management contractors.

Neville Turbit, a Director of Project Perfect software company, said

"We set out years ago to address 'real' problems experienced by 'real' project managers. We designed a single program to manage risks, issues, actions, budget, scope, documents, QA, benefit delivery and much more. In fact, to integrate with Microsoft Project and manage everything except the schedule. We achieved that goal some time ago and now we listen to the 'real' project managers and build their ideas into our project management software. One quote on our web site from a customer sums it all up. He said

"It is apparent that it was created by people who have managed successful projects and know what the rest of us need!"

"Another goal was to keep the price low, and the implementation simple. A single license for Project Administrator will cost less than US$200 and it takes about 15 minutes to set up."

"Being based in Australia, we must provide service above and beyond anyone else. We guarantee responses to email within 24 hours, and are constantly complemented for our level of service. For example last year we spent more on support for a UK customer than the value of the project management software they purchased. The problem ended up having nothing to do with Project Perfect software, but if a customer has a problem, we'll help them fix it."
