

Montreal: sparkling city still a secret destination for New Year's Eve

As partygoers anticipate the year-end festivities of New Year's Eve, Montreal's nightlife industry remains the hidden gem as a party-haven for North America. Times Square brings the masses every year to New York for the infamous countdown. Liberal laws allow Montreal to push the envelope in promoting the nightlife entertainment. Raves are legal, and after hours clubs are open every weekend.

Montreal, QC (PRWeb) December 01, 2006 --

As partygoers anticipate the year-end festivities of New Year's Eve, Montreal's nightlife industry remains the hidden gem as a party-haven for North America.

Times Square brings the masses every year to New York for the infamous countdown. However people are starting to flock a few hours north, where Montreal presents the unsurpassed New Year's Eve getaway.

As students, couples, young professionals and social groups all consider their different options; many choose Montreal for multiple reasons.

The constant global buzz is Montreal offers nightlife entertainment for a remarkably low price. With the Canadian dollar lower than the U.S dollar, visitors see vacation prices fit their budget when they convert Canadian prices into their domestic currency.

Liberal laws allow Montreal to push the envelope in promoting the nightlife entertainment. The legal smoking and drinking age is 18 years old while nightclubs, bars and strip clubs remain open until last call at 3 AM.

There is no curfew in Montreal and contact strip clubs are as visible as non-contact clubs throughout the downtown. Raves are legal, and after hours clubs are open every weekend.

An immediate comparison of Montreal and the tourist-savvy cities in North America proves that Montreal is untapped to the mainstream market. Culture diversity and European influence in Montreal creates a warm, immaculate party vibe.

"No one is an outsider in Montreal," says Angelo D'Ambra, founder and President of Montreal Nightlife Tours Inc (www.MontrealNightLifeTours.com). "The party atmosphere welcomes crowds with this European twist to it, which in turn is friendlier and outgoing."

The animated sociability of Montrealers directly influences the visitors to interact in the same manner.

"Eye games are the starting point for everyone," commented Nikki Vacchiano a bartender at a trendy supper club in downtown Montreal. "People live like it's a romantic music video, and when tourists stroll in and see this they automatically feel the vibe."

With the biggest party-time of the year around the corner, tour companies like Montreal Nightlife Tours thrive on making their clients' stay an affectionate visit. Among hundreds of bars, night clubs and supper clubs to choose from in downtown Montreal, their guests walk into their ideal type of party. To view their exclusive packages, go to <http://www.montrealnightlifetours.com/packages/main/montreal-new-years-eve-party-2007>.

"We don't want clients wasting time or money on services that can be provided professionally and honestly," said Nicholas Sakkas, a veteran tour guide with Montreal Nightlife Tours. "My job is really fun and I'm not even the one on vacation."

By providing deluxe bus transportation from New York, Boston, Toronto and other major cities, Montreal Nightlife Tours accommodates to all their guests with discounted prices for transportation, lodging and party tickets.

Through four and five star hotels readily available along with bus transportation, guests can take advantage by reducing prices through referral programs. They can also save with early booker rebates and group discounts by filling in an instant online quote at <http://www.montrealnightlifetours.com/requests/add/14>.

With a website devoted to New Year's Eve party tickets, guests will be able to select and book their party of choice. Last year's clients had selective tastes for exclusive parties. To view Montreal's 2007 New Year's Eve party list, visit <http://www.montrealnightlifetours.com/pages/montreal-new-years-eve-party-list>.

Montreal Nightlife Tours counts on their flourishing and honest reputation in Montreal by working with the top party venues to ring in 2007.

"This is definitely an exciting time to be a part of the Montreal Nightlife Tours family," added Sakkas. "Clients are hyped and so is our staff."

For more information, contact:

Anthony Branco, Publicist
Montreal Nightlife Tours
1.866.221.5885
info@montrealnightlifetours.com
www.montrealnightlifetours.com