

Exchange Hosting Reviews is Now Live

Newark, DE, January 8, 2007 – Nathan Klein announced today the launch of his new Microsoft Exchange Hosting reviews site. While other review sites revolve around general web hosting with a section, or sub-section, for Exchange Hosting, Exchange Hosting Reviews' sole focus is getting and displaying user's reviews of the various Exchange Hosting Companies.

Hosted (outsourced) Microsoft Exchange emails and features is a relatively new option for companies and individuals that need the power and flexibility of Exchange. Exchange 2003 was the first version that allowed a hosted architecture. Prior to this release, many companies had to struggle with the setup and maintenance of an in-house Exchange server, putting a limit on those who wanted the features but did not want to manage it.

With the second version of hosted Exchange coming out, Exchange 2007, there are still a relatively small number of companies offering a hosted solution. An in-house solution can cost thousands of dollars to set up and maintain, while a hosted solution can often be set up for less than $10 per user per month. This is ideal for small to medium size companies that need its power.

Within this small niche, it is important to know which companies offer which service. Some companies offer 99% or 100% uptime guarantees, while others do not. Some offer 24x7 local support while others outsource their support to other countries. These are just a few of the questions that should be considered and compared when choosing an Exchange Hosting Company. Read more at <http://www.exchangehostingreviews.com/>.
