myartspace launches extensive update to online community site for artists and photographers.

New York, NY. January 30, 2007 – myartspace, the rapidly growing online community for emerging artists, established artists and photographers, has launched a major upgrade to its site.

“The upgrade to the site really adds a lot of new capabilities for members of our community. We’ve made it very easy for the artists to have very powerful presentation capabilities of their works. We’ve also expanded our community-centric features,” comments Catherine McCormack-Skiba, co-founder and Creative Director at CatMacArt Corporation the company behind myartspace.com.

The upgrade to the site includes many new capabilities including:

- powerful navigation capabilities to browse and explore the universe of artists including featured artists, most popular and highest-rated
- new multimedia gallery capability that allows artists to integrate music, video and audio narration in their presentation of their work
- integration of other myartspace capabilities – myartspace interviews, myartspace blog, myartspace.tv, myartspace classifieds
- inclusion of community-oriented features such as messaging between community members, ratings and review of works by artists.

The myartspace community is comprised of one of the largest collections of independent, emerging and established artists and photographers globally. Additionally, myartspace manages an extensive collection of interviews, blogs, news and insights. Myartspace also sponsors a number of Competitions for artists and photographers. Last summer myartspace sent four winners in the “South of France Competition” to Saint Paul de Vence, France for a week.
