Of the 78 million Baby Boomers among us, 8,000 of them are turning 60 every day! That's a staggering number. Don't let this massive graying of America catch you off guard. You need to prepare now for this coming crisis. Here's why:

- The stock market could experience steady declines from sizeable pension assets flowing out of equities and into bonds or to even safer fixed-rate products.
- Downsizing in the real estate market or downright selling is as likely as liquidity becomes the priority over Italian marble floors and intricate teak molding.
- A severe over-burdening on Social Security might mean smaller checks for some and none for others.
- This three-decade wave of aging Baby Boomers could easily smother the welfare and health systems of this country and send the stock and real estate markets into a tailspin.

There is hope and a way to diversify your portfolio while gaining some steady cash flow. Learn how to trade the foreign currency market. You will be amazed at how easy it is to learn and get started.

Trading in the foreign currency market can be a 24-hour affair. For investors considering currency trading, here are nine advantages the currency market enjoys over other financial markets.

1) Market Size: The currency market is the largest financial market in the world. The currency market trades nearly $2 trillion every day, which enables an investor to enter and exit positions easily. With a market this size it makes it much more difficult for any single group to come in and try to manipulate the market.

2) Ease of Entry: You can get started in the currency market with as little as $250. You don't need to have a lot of money to start making great returns on your investments once you learn a trading system. Anyone can take advantage of the benefits of the currency market.

3) Profit Potential: The currency market has plenty of profit potential. You can make money in the currency market whether currencies are going up or down. If you see a currency pair is going up, all you have to do is buy it. And if you see a currency pair is going down, all you have to do is sell it.

4) Tax Advantages: Currently, short-term capital gains are taxed at your current tax rate, and long-term capital gains are taxed at only 15%. Obviously, it is much better to pay less in taxes. In the Forex market, much to investors' delight, it doesn't matter if you take your profits one minute after you enter a trade, or one month after you enter a trade: the first 40 percent of your profits are taxed at short-term capital gains rates, and the remaining sixty percent is taxed at long-term capital gains rates.

5) Trading Hours: The currency market is open 24 hours a day, from Sunday afternoon to Friday afternoon. So whether you work during the day, go to school at night, like to get up early, or get up late you can find a time to trade currencies. Also, different currencies are more active at different times throughout the day.

6) No Commissions: You never have to pay a sales commission when you trade currencies. Stock brokers, even discount stock brokers, charge you a commission for every trade you place--both to get into a position and to get out of one. You simply pay the difference between the bid and the ask prices, which you pay in the stock market as well on top of your commissions.

7) Increased Leverage: Increased leverage allows you to control a large holding of currencies with very little money up front. For instance, if you had 100:1 leverage, you could control $100,000 in the currency market with as little as $1,000 of your own money. Also if you had 200:1 leverage, you could control $10,000 in the currency market with as little as $50 of your own money. That means you get to realize all of the profits on a $100,000 or $10,000 position while only risking a small amount of your own money. Now, the opposite is also true. You get to realize all of the losses on a $100,000 position as well as a $10,000 too. So be aware that leverage is a double-edged sword, and you should use it cautiously.

8) Limit Risk And Control Profits: You have the ability in the Forex market to determine which price you would like to enter a trade and which price you would like to exit a trade. A stop, or stop-loss order is an order you place that allows you to exit your trade if the price ever reaches the level you would like to stop losing money and limit your risk. Think of a stop-loss order as a stop sign for your trade. If your trade ever reaches the stop sign (the price at which you would like to exit your trade) it immediately stops and exits so you can protect your money. A take profit order is an order you place that allows you to exit your trade if the price ever reaches the level you would like to get out of the market with a profit.

9) Limited Number of Currencies To Look Through: Currencies are traded in pairs. When one currency goes up the other goes down. While there are many currencies around the world one only needs to look at the major currencies to find all the trades they need to make money. Of the currencies pairs most often traded there are only about 20 to 25 pairs that have the most volume. Of these 20-25 pairs there are 4 pairs that account for over 80% of the trading volume. So it is not hard to find something to trade. When one pair is moving sideways another is moving up or down making for some good trading.
