MEN GAIN NEW ARSENAL IN DATING WORLD

Website Launches Largest Library of Seduction Information on Earth

Modern men are becoming increasingly disenfranchised with dating advice from the mainstream, which they feel is not helping them. More and more they are turning to fringe resources that "tell it like it is", as evidenced by the recent popularity of books such as "The Game" and TV shows such as "The Pickup Artist" or "Keys to the VIP". Call it a new men's movement if you will, it's growing by leaps and bounds, and the largest website of its kind on the subject, FastSeduction.com, is leading the charge.

It's been over 3 years since the last revision, but FastSeduction.com has now updated its famous "PUA Archives" and archive search features. Although it may sound like a collection of archeological finds in an ancient Egyptian ruin, it's actually a digital collection of works by many of the undisputed greatest modern seducers (some may call them pickup artists or "PUAs") and ladies men in the world. All these works have been made available as free downloads.

The FastSeduction.com website, also known as Fast Seduction 101, which has been in operation since the late 1990s, has long been the backbone of a secret community of pickup artists. This community was brought to light most notably in 2005 with the publication of the New York Times best selling book "The Game: Penetrating The Secret Society of Pickup Artists" by Neil Strauss.

Even while the community remained a secret to the mainstream before the release of the book, anyone who visited the website prior to then still had access to an immense amount of collected knowledge about picking up women. Almost every name of prominence in the "The Game" had contributed up to thousands of articles each sharing their rare knowledge, and these were archived in the "PUA Archives" on the website.

Names that are now well known both from the publication of the book and the subsequent 2007 VH1 reality TV series "The Pickup Artist" were among some of the most downloaded archives. In fact, the archives contributor list reads like a veritable cast of characters from the book "The Game". Names such as Style (the main pseudonym used by Neil Strauss himself during his PUA odyssey), and Mystery (the other main character of "The Game" and star of VH1's "The Pickup Artist"), along with other even more venerable names such as Ross Jeffries (known as the father of the seduction community) topped the list of popular archives.

Other names mentioned in "The Game" included in the "PUA Archives" are Jay Valens (aka Formhandle, creator of the website FastSeduction.com), Juggler, TylerDurden, Papa, Jlaix, Gunwitch, David Shade, Vincent, Svengali, MrSex4uNYC, TwentySix (aka Extramask), Playboy, Herbal , and Swinggcat. Even individuals like TokyoPUA, featured in a recently written "lost chapter" of "The Game", can be found in the archives.

While it was not realized by many back in 2005 what a profound impact being included in these archives had on the fame and notoriety of those included, it is interesting to note a new list of talent that has emerged as present and future famous PUA names. Such new names this year include the likes of Badboy, Brad P, Vin DiCarlo, ijjji, Lifeguard, A2daMIR, Player Supreme, Shark, Neo-Rio and many more. Doubtless among these names will be found the future "Mystery", "Style", and "Ross Jeffries" of the seduction community.

All totaled, there are over 70 individual archives, and over 85,000 posts in the those archives. Nearly 600,000 posts as of April 2008 can also be searched by keywords, allowing access to subject specific areas of interest in pickup, whether it be how to meet women, how to approach, things to say, how to follow up, create attraction, deal with groups, and escalate seduction.

According to co-founders Jay Valens and Ray Devans, the FastSeduction.com website is the center of the seduction universe. They also describe it as "Casanova meets the internet", and encourage all men who wish to do better with women and dating to drop by the website and learn for free.

FastSeduction.com was founded in 1999 to provide men with the greatest resources and access to knowledge about meeting, attracting, dating, and building satisfying sexual relationships with women. The website is filled with numerous resources for men seeking improvement in those areas, such as the largest searchable archive of pickup and seduction writings in the world, extensive guides, newsletters, multiple discussion boards, international resources, product reviews, and even a wingman database, truly making FastSeduction.com the "Google of Seduction".
