Synopsis: Danaí is determined to get her wings. Although she may die trying. Unless her best friend can seduce her into another dimension first.

In this suspenseful new fantasy fiction adventure, Claudia Newcorn skillfully weaves an unexpectedly contemporary and complex saga where fairies struggle through nine increasingly dangerous rites to earn their wings, even as the shadows of a forgotten prophecy gather to change their world. As Danaí and her fellows struggle to survive an ice dragon, demons, a Truthing Well, and even their own Loremaster, strange events foreshadow great changes to the Fairy folk - with Danaí at the epicenter of a long-forgotten prophecy that crosses dimensions.

“Crossover” was a 2008 semi-finalist for the Reader Views Choice Literary Awards and the Eric Hoffer Book Award. Receiving great reviews, this fantasy adventure is exciting and imaginative ... a truly wonderful read!

For both young adults and adults.

Book Excerpt:

“Eshel’s rasping voice cried out. “A prophecy this day has come true. One has come to us from Lampion, a realm rich in those things that Nonetre deserves. He has chosen to embrace our realm, and lead us down new paths of enlightenment, challenge our old way of doing things, make us leader among realms, even daementions. Give all hail to Tvashtar Tizón, anointed firelord of Nonetre!” The air quivered under the onslaught of fire daemons’ shrieks of gladness. Beside Eshel appeared a tall, glowing figure. Hidden in the shadows, Danaí stifled her dismay. It was ...”
