Attendees Gain Insight at Executive Forum

Senior executives of asset-dependent businesses gathered for the Executive Forum event hosted by Corporate Services

Baton Rouge, LA – June 24, 2008 – Corporate Services LLC, developers of TrakQuip™ and RTMS, the premier equipment and rental software applications, hosted the Executive Forum on May 2, 2008 in Houston. The event was tailored to senior executives of asset-dependent businesses.

The Executive Forum kicked off with a welcome from Michael Saint, president of Corporate Services. Following his welcome, he introduced Grant Getman, CPA, a former CFO of a successful asset-dependent business whose presentation was titled: Don't Bet Your Assets – Secrets to Higher Profits and Better Cash Flow from Equipment, People and Technology. He shared both his challenges and successes with the attendees. Grant is the founder of Enterprise Design Group (www.enterprise-design-group.com).

The next part of the program focused on developing leadership and was led by Jim Wichterman, a senior consultant with Management Action Programs (MAP – www.mapconsulting.com), a firm dedicated to accelerating sustainable growth for its clients. As an executive for numerous companies in diverse industries, Jim has directed or contributed significantly to a number of profit turnarounds. Using the film Twelve O'Clock High as a basis, attendees participated in an interactive and insightful session.

Michael Saint wrapped up the day with an open forum about the future of RTMS and TrakQuip products. Most notably was the introduction of two modules written in .NET. Attendees were very excited about the move to .NET. "We are committed to adapting the latest and most elegant technology available," said Michael Saint, president of Corporate Services. "The move to .NET reassures our clients that the investment they made in our products is secure and that the product will continue to evolve to meet their future needs. We invested several years designing the new release. We are now in the quality control phase of development so we can offer clients the cleanest product possible."

"It was an exceptional day of learning and sharing with our clients," said Michael. "We received a tremendous amount of positive feedback."

Attendees each received a personally autographed copy of the book Vital Factors by MAP CEO Lee Froschheiser.
