GIS Planning helps economic development organizations grow jobs & attract business

The World Leader in Online Economic Development Solutions

GIS Planning, Inc. is the trusted leader and inventor of web-based geographic information systems (GIS) which foster enhanced economic development. As the International Economic Development Council's (IEDC) official and exclusive partner for online property listings, demographics and online mapping products and services, GIS Planning serves clients from government, businesses and community organizations. We pioneered the field of Internet GIS for economic development from the creation of the very first web-based GIS program for economic development to our newest generation of enterprise applications. Today, GIS Planning-developed online solutions are the industry standard for economic development web sites.

GIS Planning combines state-of-the-art technical expertise with a background in economic planning practice to create user-friendly mapping programs on the Internet. The company pioneered this strategy from the creation of the world's very first web-based economic development GIS program to our latest suite of modern applications implemented throughout the United States from New York City to San Francisco. Our products are real-world, field-proven, leading-edge technologies. Today, GIS Planning is actively employed by more economic development organizations than any other economic development service provider or consultant in the country.
