

Sunday, October 26, 2008

For Immediate Release

Contact: Eric James Wolf

Phone: (937) 767-869

Speaking out in Defense of Scary Stories on the Art of Storytelling with Children Show

Eric James Wolf, professional storyteller and host of the Art of Storytelling with Children Show, is available for print, radio and television interviews to defend the use of the scary Halloween stories in the oral tradition with children.

Scary Halloween stories and ghost stories for children have taken the place of ritual trials of adulthood for teenagers, according to Mr. Wolf. They also serve as a means for adults to warn children away from dangerous places or behavior. Ghost stories and scary Halloween stories in the oral tradition can be age appropriate and satisfying for families. Currently on his the Art of Storytelling shows website he has five interviews available for easy download about the art of telling scary Halloween stories.

Eric Wolf does not condone or support horror or the graphic use of violence. "It is possible, however, by carefully working within the confines of scary Halloween stories and ghost stories for children, to leave our audience psychologically stronger and more emotionally capable of dealing with their fears or the shock of real world disasters," Mr. Wolf says.

#

Storyteller Eric James Wolf has performed nationally at such venues as the American Museum of Natural History; Bank Street School for Children; Barnard College; Blue Theater - Toronto, Canada; Columbia University; The Fund for the City of New York; Kings Island Amusement Park; New York City Clearwater Festival; New Jersey Liberty Science Center; and The International Performing Artists for Youth.

He is the host and producer of the Art of Storytelling with Children, a one hour interview format show. Mr. Wolf has M.S. in Education from Lesley University.

Eric Wolf's Website

<http://www.ericwolf.org>

The Art of Storytelling with Children Show

<http://www.storytellingwithchildren.com/>

A list of five episodes on the Art of Storytelling with Children with storytellers speaking on how to use scary storytelling with kids.

<http://www.storytellingwithchildren.com/category/scary-storytelling/>

To schedule an interview, call...

(937) 767-8696

###