ACTOR DAVID DUCHOVNY'S ANNOUNCEMENT OF SEX ADDICTION HIGHLIGHTS NEED FOR TREATMENT ALTERNATIVES

Web site's Health Based Recovery is effective in helping victims overcome their addiction

OMAHA, Sep. 04, 2008 – Last Thursday, Actor David Duchovny announced that he was entering a rehabilitation facility for sexual addiction. In an on-line news article dated September 1, Fox News reported that the likely cause was addiction to internet pornography. This case illustrates both the growth of internet porn addiction and the need for treatment alternatives for individuals who might not be able to afford in-patient rehabilitation. The Health Based Recovery methods found at Recovery Nation (www.recoverynation.com) are effective in helping individuals combat sex, love and porn addictions.

The Recovery Nation (RN) web site contains free self-help resources not found anywhere else. Each resource was built to assist in understanding sex, love and porn addictions to facilitate a permanent recovery and healing process. RN offers a comprehensive foundation of health-based education; a sincere community to provide objectivity and support; professional coaching for those who seek a more intensive, personal approach to recovery and healing; and, the collective thoughts and experiences of thousands.

RN is a Health-Based Recovery site. The focus is on value development, life management skills, emotional maturity, as opposed to the more traditional disease-based model geared towards managing addiction rather than life. RN uses an evolutionary treatment model that allows a far greater audience to apply their own values to recovery. It expands recovery from the common perception of a single transition (active addiction to lifelong recovery) to a much more robust and effective two transition process (active addiction to recovery; recovery to health).

"As a person who has transitioned from sexual addiction to health, my heartfelt support goes out to Mr. Duchovny and his family," stated Jonathan Marsh, founder of Recovery Nation. "Addiction to internet pornography is a growing public health problem, and every resource needs to be available to those who seek health and recovery." The mission of RN is to provide the most effective information, tools and training available to those seeking to end their destructive sexual and/or romantic behavior. "When it comes to addiction recovery, achieving abstinence is not enough. Ultimately, recovery is not about behavioral change, it is about making fundamental changes in the way one manages life. It involves a process of altering one's core identity so that a life can be led based on values and healthy life management skills, rather than emotional gratification and deception."

A healthy, fulfilling life is attainable to anyone committed to ending the destructive patterns associated with sexual and/or love addiction. "Addiction to sex or porn is not a fate that must be fulfilled, but a pattern that can be changed. Taking responsibility for one's decisions, and taking pride in one's actions is a necessary part of living a healthy, fulfilling life," states Mr. Marsh. The transition to a healthy life requires the mastering of a series of basic life management skills (e.g. emotional management, decision making, goal setting, prioritization, time management and most importantly, value management). "The effects of addiction on one's core identity evolve from life long patterns of misperception and misinformation, rather than from reality, and so the development of an accurate awareness of ones' core identity is critical to transitioning into a healthy life."

RN gives those who suffer from sexual addiction a path to health when other alternatives such as in-patient rehabilitation centers are not feasible.
