

Oklahoma Thunder Inserts HydroWorx into Line-Up at Integris Health Center

Middletown, PA 11.16.09//--The Oklahoma Thunder basketball organization has selected a full roster of first-class concepts in nutrition, hydrotherapy, technology, and learning as part of their vision for the new Integris Health Thunder Development Center. After a year of research and evaluation, the NBA organization made the obvious choice for aquatic training; the selection of flagship hydrotherapy pools from industry leader, HydroWorx.

The Thunder management team scouted top-flight programs across a wide spectrum of athletics to determine which ideas and concepts should be included in the new Integris Health Thunder Development Center. The Thermal Plunge, 2000 Series and Polar Plunge pools chosen by the organization will support the Center's objective to become one of the premier facilities in the league for athletic training and development.

The integration of Plunge pools into the program will offer players access to cold or warm water therapy to accelerate rehabilitation and recovery. The 2000 Series, an elite training tool, packs the most advanced technology available into aquatic therapy. An adjustable floor and flexible water depth, variable speed treadmill, two industrial strength resistance jets, and the ability to accommodate up to six athletes in one session are all part of this powerful fitness arsenal.
