

Helping families face and solve challenges:
It's all in a day's work for a social worker.

March is National Professional Social Work Month.

Facilitators...problem solvers...answer men and women...miracle workers. America's social workers can be all of these things and more to the people and families they help. That's why this March, we honor these individuals with National Professional Social Work Month, recognizing their commitment to helping others, and making a difference in so many lives, every day of the year.