

Advanced Polymer Trading to Exhibit at IranPlast 2010 International Exhibition

APT will participate in the 7th IranPlast, the international trade fair for plastic and rubber, which will be held in Tehran from 23rd of June 2010.

Advanced Polymer Trading, an international trading company specialising in the world wide trade of rubber and plastic, is pleased to announce that it will exhibit at the international plastic and rubber trade fair IranPlast 2010.

IranPlast is one of the top plastic and rubber exhibitions in the Middle East and allows petrochemical material and service companies to promote their offerings to an international audience with an emphasis on the Middle East and the CIS.

Organized by National Petrochemical Co. (NPC) in cooperation with the Iran International Exhibitions Co. (I.I.E.C), IranPlast 2010 will be held between the 23rd June 2010 and 26th June 2010 at the Tehran Permanent International Fairground.

“We are very pleased to be participating in IranPlast 2010” said Mr. Hamid Amiri, APT's Managing Director. “IranPlast is a high profile and high quality trade fair which allows us to showcase and demonstrate our offerings for the CIS and Middle East.”

The Middle East is a key market for APT where it has a significant market share in several of the Gulf states including the UAE, Qatar, Bahrain and Iran. APT is a fast growing company and plans to grow its market share in the Middle East, attending IranPlast 2010 will help that growth.

As a specialist in rubber, rubber chemicals and plastic, APT offer world class pre-sales and post-sales technical support and pride themselves in their knowledge and expertise as well as their high level of customer satisfaction. APTs participation in IranPlast 2010 is good for the exhibition and good for APT.

With more than 350 Iranian and 250 foreign companies and organizations exhibiting at IranPlast 2010, it is truly an International event for the interchange of technologies, new possibilities and new relationships.
