MeetingWave

MeetingWave members can propose networking meetings that can be accepted by anyone thereby meeting new people, with control, privacy & flexibility. Click How It Works to learn more.

MeetingWave profile pages help other users to make informed decisions about who they choose to meet with and can include meeting interests, past or present employers, job title/profession, industry, schools attended, home town, interests, etc.

Verified Profiles

Members can also have their work or alumni email addresses "verified" by MeetingWave and display an indication of that verification on their profile. When someone sees verified email domains (e.g., @ibm.com or @brown.edu) on a profile, they will know the user must be associated with the university or company identified in the email domain helping people feel more comfortable meeting the user (and vice versa). Only the verified domain is displayed - the user's personal email address will not be disclosed for everyone to see.

Use Virtually Anywhere

Members can use their verified profile urls (meetingwave.com/p/username) on LinkedIn, with blog comments, and when using Craigslist. And - request to see someone else's before meeting them or before bringing them into their network or agreeing to buy or sell an item on Craigslist.

In order to create a Profile, you must be a registered user.

MeetingWave's Corporate/Association Private Labels

MeetingWave has launched private label versions for corporations and associations to allow fellow employees to meet with other employees or fellow association members to meet with other members over coffee, lunch, dinner, golf or other networking activity for business or social purposes.

Use your company's MeetingWave to meet fellow employees to learn what each other do at the company, share background information and do a little brain storming on how to make improvements at the company and innovate.

Or, meet with fellow members of your association and exchange business cards and contacts or leads.

Click How It Works to learn how MeetingWave provides control, flexibility and privacy when meeting new people.

MeetingWave's focus is not events, but instead small targeted networking meetings over coffee, lunch, golf or other networking activity. It's easy to use.

MeetingWave's Current Alpha Corporation/Association Private Labels include:

Corporation/Association	Approved Email Domains
The Funded	thefunded.com
Intelegencia	intelegencia.com
Shell	shell.com
Exxon	exxon.com
ING Group	ing.com

JPMorgan Chase	jbmorganchase.com
Johnson & Johnson	jnj.com
IBM	ibm.com
Citi Group	citi.com
AIG	aigcorporate.com

This alpha version requires employee or association verification using one of the listed .com or .org email domains. Please also Contact Us to suggest any additional email domains for an existing private label or other feedback or suggestions.
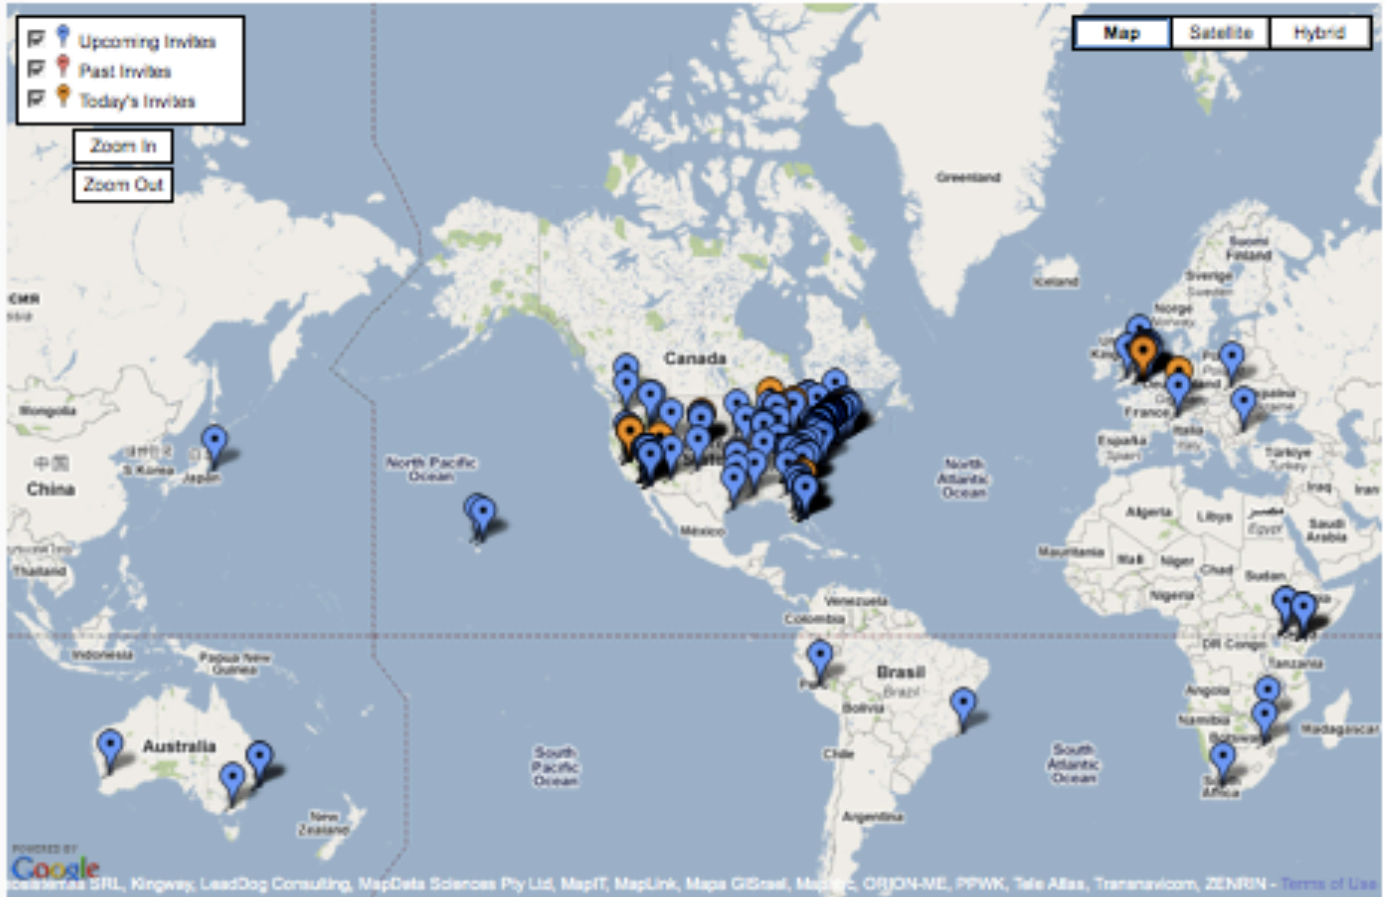

Unless you use this verification email address regularly, we recommend signing up with your regular email (e.g., gmail, yahoo, etc.) and then verifying your company or association email in step 2 of the signup process.

MeetingWave has an alternative verification option allowing for easy click through access using a link added to your company's or association's website. Check their websites for MeetingWave's link and click through to sign up without an approved email address. If you don't see our link, contact them to suggest adding MeetingWave's verification link. Tell them you'd like to network with fellow employees or association members.

Please Contact Us if you'd like to suggest a company or association for alpha testing (if possible, please provide a link to the company's or association's website, a suitable logo and the email domain used by employees or, if available, association members).

Other improvements in MeetingWave's pipeline include an upgrade to our email system, location-based mobile versions for the iPhone, Android & Blackberry platforms and other improvements.
