

Jennifer Bisceglie is an award-winning business owner of a multi-million dollar supply chain and logistics company that helps create comprehensive supply chain risk management solutions for numerous government agencies. Prior to founding InTEROS, Jennifer honed her 18 years of supply chain management experience in software companies and global distribution companies such as Manhattan Associates, Nine West Shoes (now Jones Apparel), and American Eagle Outfitters.

In 2005, Jennifer launched InTEROS to deliver comprehensive supply chain solutions to federal agencies looking to mitigate their supply chain risk and enable them to conduct business as effectively as possible. Since its founding, the company has secured a formal mentoring relationship with Accenture, landed several government contracts and received national awards.

She attributes the company's success to her highly experienced team. Each individual brings more than 15 years of strategic and operational supply chain experience; thus, enabling them to consistently and efficiently deliver immediate tangible value to every project. The company's clients include U.S. Navy, Defense Logistics Agency (DLA) and Customs and Border Protection and other government contractors such as ManTech.

Central to providing relevant solutions for each of her clients, Jennifer understands the trends and issues impacting each of their industries. Jennifer serves on the Executive Logistics Council for National Defense Industrial Association (NDIA). She has also served on the Board of Directors and as the Awards Chair for the International Society of Logistics Engineers (SOLE) from 2006-2007. Jennifer is an active member of Women in Defense (WID) and Women Construction Owners and Executives (WCOE). In addition, she is founding member of The American Small Business Coalition (ASBC), a national membership organization drawing together industry and government.

Outside of her client work, Jennifer is a highly dedicated women business owner advocate. For her dedication to this cause, she is the recipient of Enterprising Women's 2009 Enterprising Woman of the Year award as well as Washington Business Journal's Women Who Mean Business award. She is a National Founding Member of Women Impacting Public Policy (WIPP) and currently serves as Vice President of the Board of Directors, sits on the Board of Advisors, and is the National Chair of the Instant Impact Grassroots Committee. For her work with WIPP, Jennifer received the 2007 President's Award. She is also an active member of Women Presidents' Organization (WPO).

She holds a bachelor's degree in Finance from West Virginia University. Jennifer is a sought after speaker on Federal Government contracting as well as small business concerns as they relate to Federal legislation.