LOS ANGELES – September 7, 2010 – A groundbreaking new company, Health In Reach, Inc. announced today that it has been selected to present at the prestigious DEMOfall Conference, to be held in Silicon Valley September 13-15. At this legendary launch event, Health In Reach will unveil its Internet-based service that makes consumer healthcare more accessible and affordable. With HealthInReach, patients visit the website at www.HealthInReach.com to find a doctor and schedule an appointment online.

The DEMO Conference is the premier event for launching new consumer technology products. In its 20-year history, the DEMO team has reviewed more than 20,000 technologies and selected less than 10% to launch on stage at the DEMO Conference.

Health In Reach was selected to launch at DEMOfall next week where founder and CEO, Scott Sangster, will address conference attendees - a mix of leading journalists, key social media influencers, venture capitalists, and technology entrepreneurs – and give them the first chance ever to see a public demonstration of the new, innovative HealthInReach technologies.

"DEMO is an unmatched event for showcasing the latest and greatest consumer technology companies and we are thrilled to present at DEMOfall," said Sangster, a veteran of Internet and technology startups, with more than 20 years experience in online innovation. "With its history of launching household brands such as TiVo, Palm, Shopping.com, Leapfrog, and more, to be selected by the DEMO team is a tremendous recognition of the potential impact of HealthInReach."
