

The right place, the right time, the right person:
A case management professional brings it all together for the patient.

National Case Management Week is October 10 - 16.

When a patient is trying to deal with an illness or injury, it's common to get confused. That's where a case manager can come to the rescue. Case managers assess, plan and coordinate care - helping to bring together the efforts of doctors, nurses, social workers and others, then helping their patients understand everything that's happening and why. It's a complicated but rewarding job - one that's worthy of our thanks this October, and every month of the year.
