Willis Group Announces Transformation and Rebrand of Information Technology Subsidiary

Houston, TX – February 22, 2011

Willis Group announced today that its Information Technology talent services subsidiary, formerly Facilitatek Services, has been rebranded and will now be known as Genuent. The rebrand signals the culmination of a successful effort to refresh the organization's leadership, culture, focus and operational capabilities.

Over the preceding several months, Willis Group has dedicated significant energy and resources to support Genuent in the subsidiary's introspective assessment and change initiatives. Changes within Genuent include a new senior leadership team, expanded geographic footprint (New York, NY and Jacksonville, FL), new philosophical and cultural tenets, improved candidate matching and alignment capabilities, and important service and technology provider alliances.

"From time to time in the life of an organization, a shift occurs which results in such meaningful change that a new face is required to communicate and align with the transformed capabilities and values." said Mark Willis, President and CEO of Willis Group. He went on to say "We believe that identity should also serve as a reminder to the organization of who they are and what they aspire to be. This is just such a time for our Genuent team."

About Genuent

Born from the need for a fresh perspective on the business of IT staffing, Genuent embraces the idea that creating value for our customer families, both consultants and clients, is the path to sustainable success.

Genuent serves as the vessel for a set of shared values and principles which guide our team's focus and efforts at every level. It is a framework for the creation of outstanding experiences for and lasting relationships with our consultants and clients.
