About Annie

Annie is a compassionate, fun, brilliant, creative and inspiring person. She coaches her clients to discover their greatness and the abundance of possibilities life has for them. She is passionate about having her clients create breakthrough in their lives and her joy is to coach them to design the "fully-expressed" lives they have intended for themselves. Her areas of specialty in coaching and training are mainly in entrepreneurship (business start-ups in particular), parenting, health and well-being, and authentic leadership.

Annie has a PhD in Entrepreneurship, which focused on the "Personal Initiative" qualities of CEOs who have successfully grown their companies to large corporations. She is also a successful entrepreneur who has owned and managed several companies in Malaysia (in the health, retail, e-commerce, internet and training industry) prior moving to Canada with her family. Her successes were featured in Bloomberg Television, Malaysian Prime Time news, television programs and several major printed news media. She was also a columnist/writer together with her husband, Zach, for a local major newspaper in Malaysia.

when "impossible" is knocking on your door, having a life-coach creates the possibilities & gives you the support to move forward...
... it sure did for me!

The answer lies in your feminine side!

In this groundbreaking and life-changing book, authors Lilly Hills and Karen Hudson examine how women, because they are their own worst critics, have not only robbed themselves of a significant amount of joy but have made their lives far harder and more stressful than they need to be.

On a broader scale, the book speaks to how women's collective self-denigration as a gender has diluted our influence in a world in desperate need of our social, spiritual and political contributions.

Fortunately, rather than merely pointing out the problem and leaving them hanging, A Feminine Manifesta tells women exactly how to use their feminine side to break the habit of being hard on themselves, dramatically enhance their lives and show up in the world as their best selves. From this announced place, women will be primed to come

*"A Feminine Manifesta is a practical guide for being more loving and kind to ourselves. But it's more than that. It's a call for women to lead the way to the more peaceful, equitable, and caring world we so want and need for both women and men."
— Dr. Riane Eisler
Macroeconomist, social scientist and bestselling author of "The Chalice and the Blade"*
