Clements International Names New Director of Partner Solutions

Dante Disparte rejoins the international insurance provider to grow its wholesale division worldwide

Washington, D.C. (March 10, 2011) —Clements International, a leading provider of global insurance solutions, is pleased to announce the appointment of Dante Disparte as director of partner solutions. In this role, Mr. Disparte will be responsible for managing and developing the company's global broker and partner network, in addition to identifying new sales channels, customer segments and markets. His experience in corporate strategy, general management and international insurance for multinational organizations make him well-suited to lead the growing wholesale division. He also previously worked for Clements International as a licensed insurance broker.

"We are happy to welcome Dante back to the Clements team in a new and very important role," said Dan Tuman, vice president of sales for Clements International. "There is high growth potential for our wholesale division and we are confident that we will achieve it with Dante's leadership and expertise."

Mr. Disparte joined Clements from Kjaer Group, where he served as chief executive of a business with $60 million in revenues operating in the professional automotive services and distribution industry in Africa. He previously worked for the Corporate Executive Board, a leading management consultancy. In addition, he has personal experience as an expatriate, spending five years abroad working in the United Kingdom and Denmark.

Mr. Disparte holds a B.A. in international and intercultural studies from Goucher College and is an alumnus of Harvard Business School's Program for Leadership Development. He is also conversant in six languages.
