Renton, WA — Church Web Works, a global leader in website design tools for churches, today launched the newest version of its software, providing a wide new range of features and making it even easier for churches to publish professional websites at a reasonable cost.

Version 5.0 features a new control panel and content editor along with the widest array yet of templates and design features that a church, using only an Internet connection, can customize to give its site its own personality and publish an unlimited amount of content. The software's innovative and groundbreaking tools also enhance the way clients build registration forms, accept payments online and showcase their ministries to their community.

From today, churches using version 4.0 can upgrade to version 5.0 at no additional cost. New clients will automatically be registered with the new version. Church Web Works sites start at $49.99 a month.

"Church Web Works has helped us take our web site from being only a place of information to a place of connection," says Greg Stern, director of operations, Northwest Ministry Network, Snoqualmie, Washington.

Pastor John Penton, executive director of COGIC Charities, says what sold his organization on using Church Web Works was the ability to easily upload, download, edit and maintain current web site content without outside help.

Adds the Rev. Alvin Love, National Baptist Convention, Chicago, "Having easily customizable sites is a huge advantage."
