Implied Consent in New Hampshire for DWI

Almost as quickly as there were vehicles to contend with, there were laws describing how to handle drinking and driving.

Testing for alcohol concentration levels became a sure way for the state to ensure a conviction – it was undeniable proof of being over the statutory alcohol concentration limit (0.10 percent before 1994, 0.08 percent from 1994 to the present).

>> moreStatutes of Limitation under NH Criminal Law

In general, statutes of limitation pertain to the part of criminal law that prevents someone from bringing a legal claim to court because the length of time to do such has expired.

In New Hampshire, defendants could face criminal charges for criminal offenses and the statutes of limitation could be applied to both types of cases.

Damages in a NH Wrongful Death Lawsuit

Wrongful death cases could involve a wide range of situations. The most common are product liability, medical malpractice and vehicle accident cases.

Recently, there has been a significant increase in wrongful death cases involving the exposure to hazardous materials such as asbestos.
