CodePartners Announces New Relationship Manager and Client Care Program
Clients benefit from the value-added resources and strategic support.

Dallas, TX – October 6, 2011 – CodePartners, a Dallas, Texas-based software development firm, is pleased to announce the addition of Jim Widman to our team as well as the addition of a new client care program, aptly named CP Care. In an effort to ensure CodePartners continues to provide superior technology solutions and strategic value to our clients and channel partners, Jim will assume the role of Relationship Manager. As Relationship Manager, Jim will be responsible for the care of each of our clients through regular project status updates, acting as an additional point of contact for requests or concerns, and a strategic partner to help CodePartners' channel partners find and close additional opportunities with their own client base.

At CodePartners, we strive to provide the same level of commitment, care, and concern for our channel partners' clients as each of the channel partners do; and we understand that meeting their expectations is as valuable as designing the project correctly the first time. We've designed the client care platform, and specifically Jim's involvement in the care of our clients, to reflect that objective.

Prior to joining the CodePartners team, Jim's experience included several years in the business software industry, including the Sage and Microsoft business partner channel. Jim received his Bachelor of Science in Business Management, and proudly served in the US Marine Corps.

"We are excited about Jim joining our team; he has passion for ensuring the success and happiness of our clients that matches our own mission," said Bin Feng, President of CodePartners. "We are thrilled to benefit from Jim's experience in the software and accounting technology industries, and we look forward to executing strategic initiatives such as the new CP Care program that will help not only our clients, but also our channel partners' clients."

About CodePartners:
CodePartners, a Dallas, Texas-based firm, provides superior technology solutions and strategic value through software development and business process automation. With over ten years of experience as software development professionals and a focus on enterprise resource planning (ERP), financial transactions, and web applications, CodePartners continues to successfully complete projects for companies all over the world.

####