Still Driving a Horse and Buggy?

There are several software systems designed specifically for tracking executive search activity...Believing you don't need one is akin to believing you don't need a car because a horse and buggy works just fine.

Your data management system is the most important foundation of your infrastructure.

Regardless of your executive search activity, you need to collect and monitor information that is beyond the reach of applicant tracking systems (ATS) and customer relationship management systems (CRM).

ScoutRock brings together the top executive recruiting software as a service (SaaS) providers of data management systems for a full day of live demonstrations so that you can easily compare and contrast the software and services of these companies.

Identifying and choosing the right software can be overwhelming; this symposium provides an in-depth look at the best options for your software acquisition or upgrade.
