

Are you concerned that your child isn't meeting developmental milestones?

Is your child struggling with peer relationships?

Are you concerned about how your "neuro-typical" child is handling their sibling's diagnosis?

Do you want to learn about how art can be a powerful vehicle for supporting communication, development, self-expression, and creativity?

Parents are likely to have many questions and experience a range of emotions, challenges, and joys as they navigate their way along the path of Autism Spectrum Disorders. Dana Whiddon, founder of ICE LLC, will address these issues in a Q & A session for parents and caregivers. The complimentary session will be held at 1841 Broadway, Suite 1212 in NYC on December 13, 2011 from 6-8pm.

In this session parents will have the chance to discuss their concerns and learn about the innovative Art Therapy and Floortime™ programming at ICE LLC. By employing a developmental approach, ICE LLC is equipped to address your family's unique needs as your child grows from toddlerhood through adolescence and into adulthood.

Session will address the following topics:

- benefits of a multi-disciplinary approach
- using a child's passion to foster development
- using art materials to promote shared attention and engagement
- how art therapy can support developmental and communication goals
- sibling concerns
- peer relationships
- importance of self-care for parents
