Cleveland's Great Millionaires' Row

Andrews Mansion, corner of Euclid Avenue & East 30th St.

From 1875 to 1930, Euclid Avenue's Millionaires Row was considered by many to be grandest avenue in the world. One of its many admirers was Mark Twain.

Join us to hear a marvelous story about the "Row" and the day-to-day lifestyles, fortunes and tragedies of its families. Discover who built the mansions, what they cost and where the money came from.

See actual photos, inside and outside, of some of the finest homes in the world. Millionaires' Row, with its winter sleigh races and its elaborate parties, was once Cleveland's gem. What caused its decline and destruction?

Dan Ruminski creates a spellbinding entertainment experience – The Storyteller in his chair, sharing unique stories of Cleveland's past!
