The CHANGE You Want E-Learning To Be.

Moodlerooms Recognized for Excellence in Six Categories of Education Technology

Innovation, ease of use, visual appeal, support and scalability are among EdTech Digest Awards' criteria for winning products.

Baltimore, MD— Moodlerooms, Inc., Moodle partner and provider of proven e-Learning solutions, announced today that it has been honored across six different categories in EdTech Digest's 2011 Awards Program. Collecting top awards in the categories of Learning Management System, Social Networking and Open Source Solution, Moodlerooms' joule 2 enterprise e-Learning platform was also named a finalist in the categories of E-Learning Solution, Professional Development and Cool Tool. Among the criteria judges used to identify offerings playing a truly "transformative" role in education through technology were attractiveness, ease of navigation, evidence of success in the field, long-term value and comprehensive support.

EdTech Digest Editor-in-Chief, Victor Rivero, described winning entries as "innovative," "trendsetting," and "respected," noting that these products are "disrupting old models" to move education forward into the 21st century. "In a crowded field of entries, it's exciting to acknowledge those companies and products making the biggest difference," he says.

Dedicated to supporting the global open source community with the goals of promoting worldwide collaboration and e-Learning opportunities, Moodlerooms is especially pleased that EdTech Digest Award judges have recognized joule Social as one of two social/academic networking winners and joule 2 as the sole winner in the Open Source Solution category.

"Moodlerooms is honored to be recognized by EdTech Digest," says Moodlerooms Chairman and CEO, Lou Pugliese. "Being recognized by these awards validates our continued efforts to fuel the growth of the international open source Moodle community, and to offer the best possible e-Learning experience to educators and learners across the globe."
