

Free Online Games Site eArcades.com Continues to Draw Avid and Casual Gamers

eArcades.com, a newly launched free online games site, sees continued increase in membership after reporting 2,000 sign-ups in just its first week. Site owner announces update of game listings in order to accommodate the growing number of gamers on the site.

eArcades.com announced on its launching that it is hosting a huge list of 5,000 free online games directly playable on any flash-supported browser. But with its membership already exceeding 2,000, the pressure is on the website to add more offerings to gamers.

The website's owner, Internet Marketing Services, reported that an average gamer spends 104 minutes on the site. While this is a good sign of enthusiasm on the part of the gamers (and it sure is welcomed by the site owner) it also signals a big challenge. People just want to play games and there is a need to sustain that enthusiasm. This prompted Internet Marketing Services to increase its list of free online games, and they are keeping their hands full as of present. Constant update is expected from the site and players are counting on them to consistently come up with exciting new options.

Aside from its huge gamelist, eArcades.com is winning gamers because of the ease of playing free online games from the site. The games load quite fast and are playable after a 15-minute commercial from sponsors. Currently, the website has 15 categories to choose from, which range from plain fun to educational. A wide range of difficulty levels are offered, which can challenge both casual and hardcore gamers.

The site's listing is geared to appeal to different ages and skill levels so everyone can expect to have some doze of fun. On certain games, members have the option to post their names and scores on "leaderboards" so they can measure their skills against other gamers from all over the world.

Internet Marketing Services clarified that membership is free and absolutely no charged is required from players. After a brief sign-up, players can enjoy as many games as they want, as long as they choose. With eArcades meeting the New Year with a competitive edge, it can be expected that it will be a popular destination for free online games for 2012.
