

Newly Launched Site eArcades.com Aims to Bring Back the Thrill of Arcade Games

A new website called eArcades.com is catching gamers' attention with its vast offering of arcade games. Internet Marketing Services, owner of the site, announced its plans to add more free games to its database in order to sustain the enthusiasm of players from all over the world.

The gaming industry has recently been dominated by RPGs with their highly sophisticated graphics but a new website aims to bring back the thrills and spills of arcade games. Launched last Christmas Day, eArcades.com features 5,000 games that are readily playable from any flash-supported browser.

Since its launch, the website has recorded 2,000 unique sign ups and is seeing the sign up of new users on a daily basis. This high marketing traffic is associated by the site to the quality of games offered, as all of them have been handpicked by the team that runs eArcades.com.

What makes eArcades.com unique is that it also functions as a social networking website. It has features that allow players to save their scores and compare it with arcades game enthusiasts from all over the world. Registered members can also upload an avatar to their profile, allowing them to meet new friends.

Internet Market Services, owner of eArcades.com, made it clear that the arcade games offered by the site are absolutely free. In fact, casual users can enjoy the site's game offerings without having to sign up. Players simply have to visit the site and pick a game: it is as simple as that.

eArcades.com is supported by several multimedia platforms so players can easily share the arcade games they find most interesting. Moreover, the website's Twitter and Facebook pages are free-for-all so enthusiasts can interact with each other or suggest the type of games that they want to be featured.

Michael Bashi, CEO of Internet Marketing Services, announced recently that the site is coming up with new games that are to take players into a new level of excitement. He explains that the enthusiasm of gamers has encouraged the team to continue their premium services and add more items in to their arcade games database. Gamers can look forward to more exciting gamers in the coming days and a whole new level of fun that only arcade games can offer.