eArcades.com has recently revealed the newest addition to its already impressive list of 5,000 free arcade games.

This week, the gaming has added 200 more new games which include the highly rated Hill Truck Trials, Skull Escape, the classic Tic Tac Toe. The new updates also feature several Christmas games which can surely take players back to the Holiday Season.

With membership that has already exceeded 2,000 the pressure is on eArcades.com to sustain the hype. The site's recent updates are just few of what gamers can look forward to this month, according to website owner Internet Marketing Services (IMS). The company also announced that all of the new games they feature are carefully selected and handpicked by their team of developers so only the high quality items will be on the list.

The arcade games featured in at eArcades.com are readily playable from any flash-supported web browser. Visitors simply have to click on the game they want to play, watch a 15-second commercial while their game loads, and they are ready to enjoy the game as long as they want. There is also no limit to the number of games users want to play, as long as they have enough time to do so. IMS clarified that absolutely no fee will be collected for playing at the site. Membership is free as well.

Players who want to interact with other arcade games enthusiasts have the option to sign up with the site. Membership will allow them to keep up with the series of updates eArcades will dish out and meet new friends at the same time.

eArcades.com was launched on December 25th the previous to a worldwide audience with an offering of 5,000 unique games on 15 different categories. The gaming site is a project of Internet Marketing Services, a company that has been successfully engaged in the online business since 2007. Michael Bashi, company CEO, says the team is excited with the prospect of entering the gaming industry amidst the fierce level of competition. The gaming website plans to come up with more updates in the coming days in order to sustain the successful launch it had last Christmas Day.
