The recent introduction of the home security systems from Elite Security Services has opened new options for customers in Canada. The company is counted amongst the most rapidly expanding dealers in the American home security industry. A complete range of affordable security solutions from them are now available in Canada, too.

The affordable home security systems introduced by Elite Security Services have made an impressive beginning in the Canadian market. It may be recalled that the services were introduced in this country not too long ago. Elite Security Services is one of the most successful domestic security providers in the American market in the recent months. The low cost packages from the company are all updated with the latest technological enhancements in this field. Now the company looks all set to emulate its success in the United States in the Canadian market, too. Many Canadian households have already installed the top of the line security solutions from them.

The highly efficient home security systems packages from Elite Security Services are available from an expense of only $35.99 per month. They also have two more packages with a higher level of technological brilliance priced at $40.99 and $44.99 per month. The wireless packages from them can function without the home power supply because it has an independent battery back up system. The most popular feature of their Elite Package is its cellular back up mechanism. This technology helps the system to function without a basic telephone line. This package is extremely popular in the United States. All the components used in the security packages of the company conform to the latest trends of the industry.

This quickly emerging home security systems company is owned by the American security industry stalwart Mr. Paul Shakuri. He informed about the future plans of the company saying, "We are extremely happy to achieve initial success in Canada. Now are in an expansion mode, and would want to reach out to the remotest parts of Canada with our service". The overall customer experience of the homeowners dealing with Elite Security Services in Canada has been extraordinary. Ben from Montreal thanked them for their service saying, "I am really happy with the security package installed by Elite. The company is highly professional and provided me exactly what I wanted".
