Elite Security Services has further improved their range of home security systems with the addition of voice connect technology. This is one of the latest innovations in the field of domestic security that helps the users stay connected to the monitoring centers without a land line telephone.

Voice connect technology has been introduced by Elite Security Services as the latest enhancement for their home security systems. This latest technology helps the house owners to keep in touch with the monitoring stations even without a basic telephone connection. The new technology is available now in the form of the premium package from the company. Elite Security Services is a familiar name in the industry now because of their amazing progress in the United States and Canada ever since they made their appearance in this highly competitive industry. The company has rapidly expanded in all parts of Canada and America with their excellent packages, backed up by exemplary customer service.

Traditional home security systems require a land line telephone connection to communicate to the monitoring stations. Therefore, it is important to have an active land line phone for the optimum use of these systems. The main disadvantage of this type of system is that it can not be used by households that do not have a land line phone. Moreover, in many instances, burglars tend to cut the telephone lines before breaking in. The new voice connect technology opens up the option of round the clock security for households without a landline phone. Elite Security Services is now offering the amazing benefits of this technology for a monthly cost of only $40.99 only. Introducing the addition of this technology to their systems, the owner of the company Mr. Paul Shakuri said, "Many households have done away with land line phones these days, but they do require home protection. This package is tailor made for families that do not use land line phones".

Many companies provide similar technologies in their home security systems, in America and Canada. However, low cost and fantastic customer service has made Elite Security Services one of most preferred providers of security systems. This new package has already been installed by many homeowners both in Canada and the United States. "I always wanted a sound security system for my home. Elite Security Services has provided me all I wanted. The company representatives are extremely helpful and professional", said Alex, a customer of the company from Alpharetta.
