

Elite Security Services Introduce Advanced Home Security Systems for Canadian Households without Landline Telephone

The surveillance of advanced home security systems can now be availed by Canadian households that do not have a landline telephone connection, thanks to Elite Security Services. The recently launched Elite Package from the company is equipped with the latest Digital Cellular Technology to eliminate the requirement of a basic telephone.

The usage of home security systems is no longer related to the availability of landline telephones. Elite Security Services has recently introduced their highly acclaimed Elite package in Canada. The highlight of this package is the digital cellular technology that helps it function without a landline phone. The company is a leading name now in the home security market, in the United States. They have made immense progress within a short time from inception, and at present they are making rapid inroads in the Canadian market. The benefits of this advanced security system can be availed by spending a nominal $44.99 per month.

Landline telephone connections were indispensable for the functioning of the home security systems at one point of time. Therefore, the use of these systems was limited within home owners who had basic telephone service. Moreover, it is easy for the miscreants to deactivate these traditional systems by disconnecting the telephone lines. However, things have changed dramatically with the advent of the cellular backup technology. Talking about the introduction of the revolutionary technology to their security package, owner of the company and eminent security expert Mr. Paul Shakuri said, “A home security package can not get better than this. With this system, you are always connected to your nearest monitoring station”.

Apart from this package, Elite Security Services has two more highly successful home security systems named Basic and Premium packages. All the packages feature the latest features and components available in the market. Security industry experts feel that the affordable price offered by the company is a major contributor behind their exceptional success. Many of their customers have also expressed their satisfaction about the customer friendly behavior of the company executives. Amanda, a customer from Burlington thanked the company saying, “It is a pleasure to do business with Elite Security Services. Highly professional service within affordable price”.
