DROP BY DROP: RENAISSANCE DALLAS TX HOTEL RECOGNIZED FOR WATER CONSERVATION PROGRAM

The Renaissance Dallas Hotel has been recognized by Dallas Mayor Rawlings for its efforts in water conservation.

Dallas, TX – In recent months, Texas has experienced a devastating draught. Dallas Mayor Rawlings asked local residents to do their part in conserving water usage. The Renaissance Dallas Hotel embraced the idea and has been recognized in saving thousands of gallons of water.

This hotel in Dallas, Texas, is always eager to help its local community, so when water restrictions were put in place the hotel quickly pledged its support for the City of Dallas Water Conservation Committee. The Committee asked local businesses to monitor and find ways to reduce water usage, particularly in the hospitality industry. With an amazing 146 billion gallons of water saved through the City of Dallas program, the Renaissance Dallas Hotel is pleased to do its part.

“Although the Dallas hospitality industry water conservation guidelines put forth by the City of Dallas are strictly voluntary, we felt like it was our responsibility to the community to save water,” said XXX, General Manager of the Renaissance Dallas, TX hotel. “Green initiatives like this water conservation program help our hotel be a responsible member of the Dallas business community.”

The Renaissance hotel in Dallas, Texas, asks guests to responsibly use linen and towels and only request changes when necessary. The hotel will also only serve water in the dining rooms by request only. These simple measures can have an enormous impact on water consumption, as unused water in dining areas and unnecessarily washed towels can quickly waste gallons and gallons of water.

While the state continues to struggle with draught problems, the city of Dallas has saved billions of gallons of water—enough to satisfy the indoor water needs of every citizen of the United States, according to Dallas Councilmember Linda Koop. At least guests at the Renaissance Dallas Hotel will rest easier knowing that their stay will minimally impact the local water consumption.

Not only will guests help Dallas save water, but they will also enjoy luxurious accommodations just minutes from great Dallas attractions. The iconic Renaissance Dallas Hotel building welcomes guests to enjoy some of the best accommodations in North Texas while doing their part to help out the residents of Dallas.
