Baskervill welcomes John Michael Currie

RICHMOND, VA (February 14, 2012) – Baskervill is pleased to announce Mr. John Michael Currie, architect and fellow, Royal Society for Public Health, recently joined the firm as vice president of the healthcare group.

With over 35 years of experience dedicated exclusively to healthcare facility planning, programming, and design, Mr. Currie is responsible for over 200 healthcare facilities across the United States and throughout the world, including Canada, Europe, Asia, and the Middle East. His work ranges from community hospitals to academic medical centers, specialty hospitals, and cancer care facilities, among others.

He is consistently ranked among the leading experts in the nation on the development of healthcare facilities, and his critically acclaimed book on the history of healthcare architecture, The Fourth Factor, was published by the American Institute of Architects Press in 2007. It received the 2010 AIA Grassroots Excellence Award.

Mr. Currie also has nearly 40 years of experience in undergraduate and post-graduate teaching at five universities. He currently sits on the Advisory Council for the Health Care Architecture graduate program at Clemson University, in addition to his teaching role at John Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health.

Mr. Currie received a Master's of Business Administration from the University of Liverpool in England. An alumnus of Clemson University, he received both a Bachelor of Arts in Architecture and a Master in Architecture before beginning his career in 1973. He is a member of the American Institute of Architects, the American Society of Healthcare Engineering, the Royal Society for Public Health, the American Association of Medical Administrators, and the Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation.

“Baskervill is excited to welcome John to the team. With his impressive background and stellar reputation, we are proud to have him working with our healthcare group, enabling us to further expand our healthcare capabilities to better serve our clients,” stated Robert Clark, P.E., president.
