

Elite Security Services Adds New Home Security Systems Video on Carbon Monoxide Smoke Detector to its YouTube Channel

Premium home security systems dealer in America and Canada, Elite Security Systems, has just made an addition to their YouTube video channel. The new video will explain the basics of the smoke detector that the company uses in all their packages. The company presently provides three excellent security packages for a nominal price.

Elite Security Systems has added one more home security systems video in their popular YouTube channel. The company had launched this video channel a few months ago to educate the homeowners about the different devices of a security package. The new video demonstrates the basic functioning of the smoke detector device that the company uses. Elite Security Services has been providing exemplary service in the home security market since last few months. The packages offered by the company are available within affordable price range and provides reliable protection to the life and property of the users.

Elite Security Services is owned by the eminent home security systems expert Mr. Paul Shakuri. Mr. Shakuri has designed many security systems in the past and is now dedicated to providing low cost security solution to the house owners. In this video, he says, “Unlike the traditional smoke detectors, this one not only sounds the siren, but also notifies ADT that there is a fire in your house”. He also added that the equipment is capable of detecting heat changes over a short period of time if there is a source of fire inside the walls. Smoke detectors are an indispensable part of a security package because they save the house owners from inhalation of harmful carbon monoxide.

The customer centric service offered by Elite Security Services has made them one of the most preferred providers of home security systems in the United States and Canada. All their packages are well equipped with sophisticated features. The company has always been adding new devices and features to their packages. The customers are often provided with lucrative freebies by the company. Talking about the long term goal of his company, Mr. Shakuri says, “We want to secure all households in Canada and the United States. This is only possible by promoting a crime free society by increasing our awareness”. With changing times, home protection has become a requirement these days. Elite Security Services has taken a leading role in providing cost effective security solution to all.

About the Company: Elite Security Services is a rapidly growing company in the home security industry. They offer economical home security solutions in America and Canada. A new video channel has been added to the YouTube video channel of the company.
