

Hunter TrueID™ For Children

Hunter TrueID™ - For Children

The U.S. Department of Justice states that approximately 800,000 children are reported missing each year. To combat this trend, keeping children safe is law enforcement's top priority. The principals of Hunter Systems Group, Inc., a leading developer of law enforcement and public safety products, have been keeping communities safe for over 15 years. And now we are using our best-in-class technologies to provide the same level of expertise in protecting our most precious assets - our children.

Hunter Systems Group, Inc. has developed a facial recognition software product, Hunter TrueID™ which enables parents to enroll their children and help law enforcement identify missing children and return them home safely.

How it works:

A parent or other interested party may enroll a loved one at www.huntertrueid.com. A photo and limited information about their child is then automatically passed on to the Hunter TrueID™ database via secure internet connection. Once a missing or lost child has been located by a police department and their identity is unknown, this picture can be compared against the Hunter TrueID™ database using cutting-edge facial recognition technology. If the system receives a match, the child's information will be displayed so he or she may safely be returned.

Most police departments are limited to fingerprints and in certain cases DNA. However, the gathering of this information may be difficult if the child is unwilling or unable to provide sample DNA or fingerprints. With Hunter TrueID™, an officer may take a picture of the child and compare that photograph against the database in real-time from any location.
