

Helping people overcome some of life's most difficult challenges ... that's why social work matters.

March is National Professional Social Work Month.

This month we salute the passionate, dedicated professionals who have an impact on those in need. While March is the time to recognize National Professional Social Work Month, we thank these private practitioners, educators, community leaders, policymakers and researchers for developing, advocating and delivering social programs all year long. By providing valuable services throughout the communities in which they live, social workers are instrumental in helping others look toward a promising future.