

MEET THE EXPERTS

Parents and teachers can enjoy free access to our team of special education experts to get information on reading strategies and advice to help their children overcome reading difficulties. Our academic team covers the full range of Reading Sciences and Special Education.

“We're here to give parents and teachers information about reading, free of charge”

Silvia is our Clinical Neuropsychology and Learning Disabilities specialist. In more descriptive terms, Silvia offers you over a decade of field and research experience in reading struggles. She was invited by Linda Siegel, PhD, to join her at the University of British Columbia. Linda is one of the top Dyslexia researchers world-wide. Silvia offers you vast expertise in reading problems. We are very proud to have her on board. For more information or to do an interview Silvia can be contacted directly at smazabel@dynaread.com.

Mark is our Cognitive Neuroscientist. Since persistent reading struggles typically have their roots in neurological issues (see the Definition in the right margin), you will enjoy access to his vast knowledge and expertise in this field. He can help discern if there are reasons to suspect specific issues, and will be able to provide suggestions how to perform certain exercises to train and help overcome challenges in these areas. For more information or to do an interview Mark can be contacted directly at cmwessinger@dynaread.com.

Dave brings two important knowledge fields to you. Special Education, and Counseling Psychology. He brings both solid academic knowhow and significant field experience to your home. Every struggling reader needs "special" education. But not every "special" approach works for every child. This is where Dave can be of value to you. His second Masters Degree and work experience is in Counseling Psychology. And this is where you personally can benefit as well. Dave is very sensitive and understanding when it comes to the tension and stress struggling readers can bring into the home, or classroom. He can share tips and advice how to deal with certain situations.
