1 out of 4 women
over 45

While many fibroids are small and won't ever need treatment, others can grow and spread aggressively.

hysterectomy should be the last option
NOT the first

A diagnosis of fibroids is often followed by the recommendation for hysterectomy, because many doctors still aren't aware of a non-surgical alternative called Uterine Fibroid Embolization.

take control

If you are already experiencing symptoms like pelvic pain and cramping, excessive bleeding, anemia, exceptional fatigue...
it's time to take control and learn more about your options.
