

LAYERS OF LEAD IN FRISCO

Since 1964, more than 300,000 pounds — 150 standard tons — of lead air emissions have been deposited over a 114 square-mile area that covers much of Frisco and reaches into communities to the north and south.

This map was created using information from air dispersion modeling and calculations conducted by Spirit Environmental. It shows where the heaviest concentrations of airborne lead pollution from Exide's smelter have accumulated over almost 50 years of operation.
