Reliable

Operation on a cloud network is based on a platform for rich media and HD video distribution. The network delivers unprecedented scale for all media formats to meet the demands of today's broadcast size audiences online. Delivering streams from servers that are closest to end users, often from within their own ISP, the network better avoids Internet congestion and minimizes network latency. Accessed through a browser window on the mobile device enables seamless software updates and ensures no downtime or required user intervention.

Efficient

The protocol used benefits the overall mobile quality experience based on the type of network a mobile device uses to connect to the Internet. Using real-time connection sensing to apply the best optimization, especially to overcome the high-latency and packet loss associated with cellular networks, it delivers smart data retransmission for oversubscribed mobile networks, accounting for last-mile connection inconsistencies and HTTP pipelining for mobile browsers. Ultimately, users are rewarded with shorter times to receive data initially as well as fewer dropped data connections during sessions.
